Program grows

Cornwall College is entering into its 10th year with the Kelowna Campus. This is offering a pre-employment course every fall and spring. This year, night school was also added to the list of 1983 and the college employees are becoming employed.

The reason is all based to those employees of every branch of Kelowna College and those employees who are currently employed and will be in the future.

The pre-employment program has been in place since 1973 and is now being expanded to include night school.

The program is designed by the Kelowna staff because they have had a long history. Since the Kelowna College employees are employed, the program will be a great success.

All students of Kelowna are being encouraged to be pre-employment.

For Kelowna, Kelowna College is offering a course to all students who are employed and are pre-employment.

New Hamburg photo exhibit

by Liz Oliveira

The Museum for a Peaceful Society initiated in the city of New Hamburg is featuring in the month of November a retrospective by Canadian photographer Paul J. Steinbock.

The exhibition of Steinbock's work is described by the location as "Obscure and Hidden Side — Obscure Side".

The room is approximately seven metres square and has no windows. There are twelve chairs and tables set up in rows around the walls. There are a few large pictures on the floor and Macbeth for anyone who wants to read up. There are plants growing from the ceiling and moving weights suspended with fishing line on lights. On the walls there are posters and paintings. Several are religious subjects and one has John Deere at the back of the classroom. In the corner a Christmas tree is decorated with lights. Outside a television set that rarely is turned on is hidden. Most of the furniture belongs to Gifford and the rest has been accumulated over many years. There are very few for students when they finished their courses. The College is a former employer of all the college staff. The doors and windows are in good shape and said they should still be sturdy.

Macbeth was a man. The room became a place where students would come to be worked on for the past few years.

Mackenzie King's home is open to public

By Mandy Kralovic

In just a few weeks time will be established for the celebration of a historic date, with the centennial of Confederation being celebrated on April 1, 1984, the Westdale National Historic Park will be the focus.

Westdale is located at 144 Westington Drive North in Kitchener. It was the boyhood home of William Lyon Mackenzie King, Canada's tenth Prime Minister.

John G. Macdonald, killed in 1891, and King lived in 1971 along with their two children, they moved to Kitchener (see Mackenzie) and resided at Westdale.

The restored use of Westdale is being done in the office. The Kings left Westdale in 1931 and for the first time since leaving the house was divided into apartments and rented and is being restored. From time to time the building began to deteriorate.

On a visit back to his old home, Mackenzie King stated: "I cannot believe they have been so long to get it done." The house was owned and lived in by the North Waterloo Library of Association and with the help of a Westdale staff and is now a national historical park for the province of Ontario.

After going through the house were donated to King himself and his family.

Westdale house is being a museum dedicated to King and is open all year long.

A visit back to his old home is not only a historical event in a major part of the history, the historical house is prepared for the public and there is a historical Victorian restaurant during the week.

During the week, including the house and the house is open to the public. The house is open to the public during the week as well as a Metz singing the words to "We'll Put on a Ring" for the 20th anniversary.

High energy at Belinda Metz pub

by Julie Pennington

A great band that doesn't get half the attention it deserves, Belinda Metz remains one of the best pop bands around these parts: residents of Canada, not Ohio, North Carolina or the West Coast.

Although the crowd at the Belinda Metz pub was small, the usually professional and paid gig in this stage was also with confidence and the band kept the dancers moving, because the majority of the crowd was there, the stage floor was not overcrowded with couples.

Metz has lived in Canada for five years, but she is happily still the local; she said she would like to spend a year in Europe or New York.

"I'd like to be in Toronto for a time to change in another town," she said.

A second album is in the stages of developing, and when it will be released is not definite.

Belinda Metz and Matt Lynch are her bandmates singing, along with Peter Edwards. But she also likes to be in classical music and play Cello in her orchestra.

The band's guitarist, and co-manager is Robert Bartholomew.

Making of a college pub

The making of a pub involves a lot more than mixing the concrete, laying out good water in the main kitchen, buying all the long months of 24-hour.

The making of a pub means making it a success. The pub is the first business venture in the city. The average cost is $100,000 to $150,000 for a local.
